Workshop Description:

alla prima; a method of painting in which pigments are laid on in a single application instead of being built up by repeated paintings.

This painting class that will establish and reinforce a strong foundation for your new or building exploration of "alla prima observational painting." Sometimes all you need is a good road map or a little help to keep you on track. Still-life painting is a great way to build new skills and advance established painting skills. This class will present a strategy for paint application, color mixing, and an understanding of the structures that create the illusion of space and volume.

The workshop format will include:

Day 1: The rainbow palette is a prism of light, and the tea milk and honey paint applications process

Day 2: Two and three value structures, contrast is volume, dark backgrounds, and light objects.

Day 3: Transparency and luminosity, dark objects on a light background

Kip Bradley Biography:

For the past 13 years, Kip has worked as the Studio Programs Coordinator at the Telfair Museums, developing socially based art programs that encourage observational literacy for people from 4-100 yrs. young. Working locally and internationally, he also organizes sketching and painting groups and teaches workshops encouraging people to explore a sense of presentness through painting and drawing.

An active landscape painter, Kip makes on average 3 on-site plein-air paintings and one still-life painting each week. (Chances are you've seen him set up with his easel around town.) The work strives to balance the materiality of the painted surface juxtaposed with the traditional illusion of volume and depth. A consistent routine of painting and social media posting with written narratives has been established over the last 12 years.

Kip exhibits artwork regionally and nationally and is an Associate Member of the American Impressionist Society. He often participates in regional plein-air painting competitions.
