Jim Guerard moved to the Landings in 2013 from California when he retired from Adobe Systems, Inc. as Vice President and General Manager of Adobe's Creative Cloud.

He is a self-taught photographer who began exploring the medium in 2007 as entertainment on weekends during long business trips to Europe and Asia. He then journeyed deeper into nature photography after moving to The Landings, honing his craft on the island's scenic vistas and rich population of wildlife.

When venturing off Skidaway Island, Jim's priority is collecting images from around the world intended to stir awareness and offer glimpses of elements in nature and distant cultures that are rapidly changing, and in some cases at risk of disappearing entirely. His travels in the next year include multiple trips to Europe, Asia, Africa and the Arctic Circle.

In addition to his busy travel schedule, Jim works closely with the Landings Photography Club and the Landings Art Association. He sits on Committees for the Landings Club and does extensive photography for the club including aerial photography of the golf courses. His works are featured for all to enjoy in the Landings Wellness Center.

He has a Bachelor's degree from the University of Vermont, an MBA from the Darden Graduate School of Business at the University of Virginia and is a former adjunct professor at Clemson University.

A regular LAA volunteer, Jim has garnered several awards as well as being Artist of the Month on several occasions. For those who'd like to delve into the world of photography, Jim will be conducting a three day Digital Workshop (January 7-9). Please contact Workshop Chair, Penny Thompson at ppandjt@comcast.net for additional information or to register. Check out LAA's first of each month's newsletter for other workshops, info, and registration forms.
